

ABOUT WMHO

The Ward Melville Heritage Organization (WMHO), founded in 1939, is a not-for-profit corporation that protects and preserves historic and environmentally sensitive properties deeded to it by Ward Melville.

The organization owns three (3) historic properties that are listed on the state and national register for historic places, and an 88-acre wetlands preserve. The properties are open to the general public for onsite and distance learning programs. Over 70 multidisciplinary educational programs and performances are offered year-round for children and adults.

Your donation will not only enable you to become a part of Stony Brook history; it will also help preserve Stony Brook's heritage. Become part of the legacy and secure your memorial plaque today.
